Muhammad Marmaduke Pickthall (born Marmaduke William Pickthall, 7 April 1875 – 19 May 1936) was a Western Islamic scholar noted for his English translation of the Qur'an (1930). A convert from Christianity, Pickthall was a novelist, as well as a journalist, a teacher, and political and religious leader. He declared his conversion to Islam after delivering a talk on 'Islam and Progress' on 29 November 1917, to the Muslim Literary Society in Notting Hill, West London.

Pickthall travelled across many Eastern countries, gaining a reputation as a Middle-Eastern scholar before declaring his faith as a Muslim, Pickthall was a strong ally of the Ottoman Empire. He studied the Orient, and published articles and novels on the subject. While in the service of the Nizam of Hyderabad, Pickthall published his English translation of the Qur'an with the title "The Meaning of the Glorious Quran". The translation was authorized by the Al-Azhar University and the Times Literary Supplement praised his efforts by writing "noted translator of the glorious Quran into English language, a great literary achievement.

In 1920, he went to India with his wife to serve as editor of the Bombay Chronicle, returning to England in 1935, a year before his death at St Ives, Cornwall. It was in India that he completed his famous translation, The Meaning of the Glorious Quran.

Pickthall was buried in the Muslim section at Brookwood Cemetery in Surrey, England.

For this project, The Meaning of the Glorious Quran by Muhammad Marmaduke Pickthall was entirely reviewed and revised at Evergreen Islamic Center, San Jose, CA. Its classical biblical old style English was replaced into contemporary American English.

He had won three world Qira'at competitions in the early 1970s. Abdus-Samad was one of the first huffaz to make commercial recordings of his recitations, and the first president of the Reciters' Union in Egypt.
